A Passion for Fashion:

"Spend more, buy less!" This helpful tip was given at the "Let's Talk Fashion" workshop held at Walnut Grove on Saturday, March 3rd, 2012. This fashion tip is just one of many ways we can learn to dress fashionably while still watching our wallets. Over thirty women attended this workshop, each with their own styles and level of fashion knowledge. It was wonderful to have two main speakers cover topics in all areas of fashion - Jocelyn Quarles, a fashion blogger and wardrobe consultant, gave an overview of why fashion matters, along with practical style tips and secrets. Lindsey Enyart, a day-dress designer for Laundry and Perry Ellis, explained the process of designing a garment from its conception to creation. The workshop concluded with a social gathering and a fun scarf-tying segment. Thank you to all who participated.
